THE Wistar Family.

On February 3rd, 1696, there was born to Hans Caspar and Anna Catharina Wüster a son Caspar, in the village of Hilspach, some six miles from Heidelberg, in the then Electorate of the Rhenish Palatinate. The father was a huntsman, or forester, in the service of the Prince Palatine, and the office seems to have been hereditary in this family, as Caspar would have inherited it and been assured a comfortable living, for Hans Caspar is said to have offered to resign in favor of his son, if the latter would relinquish his intention of emigrating. Caspar preferred making his own way in America, and it is related that he gave up his share of the patrimony to his sisters, asking that his father give him an outfit and pay his passage to this country. The first we know of Caspar after leaving the Fatherland, is his arrival in Philadelphia, September 16th, 1717. His possessions consisted of his clothing, a double barrellled gun and a pistareen; the gun is still preserved by one of the family and is curious enough to warrant mention. The barrels are not side by side, but one above the other; each is provided with a flash pan as in an ordinary flint lock, that for one barrel being axially opposite to that for the other; these two barrels revolve on a pin extending backward from between the barrels and entering the stock, each is brought successively uppermost to be acted on by a lock with its single hammer, flint and trigger, which three pieces are unfortunately lost, but formerly were fast to the stock. It is told that his first work here was helping to harvest apples, for which he was paid in as many of them as he could eat and carry away; these apples, with some bread bought with the pistareen, made the immigrant's first meal here. Later he was employed by a soap and candle maker to wheel ashes; afterwards he worked at making buttons of metal, wood and horn, and in his marriage certificate is described as a button maker. There seems to be no evidence of the present spelling of the name Wistar before 1721, when the above Caspar took an oath of allegiance to King George, so that it is not known how early he assumed the new form which again appears when in 1724 a bill was passed to better enable Caspar Wistar and others to trade and hold lands in the Province. Two years later we again find him mentioned by name in a list of the principal merchants. In 1725 he seems to have been interested, though not actively, in the manufacture of iron. On May 25th, 1726, he married Catherine, the daughter of Dirck Jansen, who lived in Germantown, and was prominent there in the early years of the last century. Catherine's mother was Margaret, the daughter of Hans Millan, who owned property in Germantown between 1683 and 1689, and who built the Wyck House about 1700. While travelling in New Jersey on business connected with button making, Caspar noticed some sand similar to that used in Germany for making glass, and determined to try its manufacture here. Not having money enough he borrowed capital, and so started the first glass works in America in 1739 or 1740, which after his death, were carried on by his son Richard.

It is about this time that the following is related of our ancestor. Having been nominated to some political office, his opponent, hoping to mortify him and prevent his election, hired a man to wheel ashes near the polls on election day. Caspar saw the trick, and saying, "Friend, thee does not know how to wheel those ashes properly, I will show thee," threw off his coat and wheeled the ashes about. The result was the people carried him on their shoulders and he was elected without a dissenting vote.

Little is known of his later life, except that he was a prosperous merchant. At the time of his death, which occurred March 21st, 1752, he was living on the North side of High Street, now Market, between Front and Third. This property was bought in 1743, and in the deed he is described as merchant. His will, made February 13th, 1752, giving his trade as brass button maker, makes among other bequests the half of his tools and materials used in this trade to his wife, the other half to his son Richard, who also gets the land and glass house with its tools in New Jersey, on condition of his giving yearly, while he holds the same, to his brother Caspar some seven hundred feet of glass and three and a half gross of bottles, both of various specified sizes. The other children are left money and land in different places. To his sister, Maria Barbara Hitner, is bequeathed a piece of plate to cost £10, and to his nephew, Martin Ulmer, £20. One hundred guilders is also directed to be paid, on the arrival of each in Philadelphia, to the children of his brother Lodavick Wistar, and his sisters Dorothy Grushown and Albertina Ulmer. His wife, brother-in-law Richard Johnson, kinsman David Deshler and son Richard, are appointed executors.

Hans Caspar and Anna Catharina had other children, of whom the following is a record taken from the Register of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Neckar-Gemünd, some five miles above Heidelberg on the Neckar: Anna Barbara, born 1702; Albertina, born 1703; Johannes, born 1708; Johann Ludwig, born 1711; and George Bernhard, born 1713. Caspar's birth, occurring before the above book was begun, accounts for his name not being given, and it is probable that the record was in a previous book destroyed during the wars of that period. Hans Caspar died January 13th, 1726, aged fifty-five years; and in the next year John, the Johannes above mentioned, emigrated to America, having been sent for by his brother Caspar; this John more nearly kept the original spelling of his name, and it is from him that the numerous and well known Wister family is descended. Anna Barbara, the eldest daughter above mentioned, married about 1723 George Bauer; their daughter, Anna Katerina Barbara, married John Henry Keppele; many Philadelphia families are among their descendants. Of the rest of the children nothing more is known; it is inferred that the parents were not natives of that part of Germany where we first find record of them.

Hilspach is now a small village of some eight or nine house, on a hill rising from Neckar-Gemünd, and the house in which Caspar Wistar was born was standing in 1893 and was remarkable in the village as being the only one with a second floor. It had passed out of the Wüster family to the ancestors of those now living in it.

The scheme used in the following pages is to give to each generation a Roman numeral, to each family in that generation an Arabic numeral, and to each person a letter, so that each member of the family by birth is known by a combination of the three characters: e. g. Benjamin Davids is child "b" of family "9" in generation "IV"; the name next following in the same line is that of wife or husband, and in the case cited the reference following the wife's name shows her to have been one of the Wistar family, child "b" of family "11" of generation "IV"; in case of all such intermarriages the issue is carried down on the father's side only. In all marriages having issue the children are found by referring to that generation and family given at the extreme right, while the parents' families are found by referring to that generation and family at the head of the paragraph, in this case III 3, when two such references are found there, it shows that the husband and wife were both members of the Wistar family, as in V 22. Dates following names before and after hyphens are those of birth and death respectively; that following "m" is the year of marriage; approximate dates are given by substituting an apostrophe for the first two figures, as '27, where it is known that an event happened before a certain date a dagger (†) is prefixed to the apostrophe, as †'97, and where such an event happened after a certain date the same mark follows the approximate date, as '71†. Where a member of the family by birth married more than once, it is shown by " 1)", " 2)", etc., being prefixed to the husbands' or wives' names, children of such marriages being shown in the same way; where a member of the family by marriage was married previously or subsequently it is shown by as many asterisks (*) being placed before or after that person's name as there were such marriages, as III 2 a was the third wife of Richard Hartshorne; where such previous marriage is shown by the maiden name of the wife being given, the asterisk is omitted. The surname of a family is that given next above in large type. Died single is shown by "d. s."; having no children by "n. c."; child or children by "Ch." Twins are shown by the names being contained in a brace.

The compiler wishes to extend his sincere thanks to the many members of the family as well as others, who have given him assistance, without which this work could not have been accomplished, and it is gratifying to state that in general aid was cheerfully given; in many cases with offers of further help and with encouraging wishes.

It has been sought to make this genealogy as free from errors as possible, but it is not thought to be either full or correct; therefore any additions and corrections are asked for and will be kindly and thankfully received. Many requests for data have brought no replies, and many more have not brought full answers; these, together with dates asked to be withheld, must account for many of the blank spaces. It is hoped many such may yet be filled, and it is again asked that notice of all errata and additional information be sent to the compiler as soon as possible, to be used in a supplement, which it is proposed to issue as soon as sufficient material is at hand.

SUPPLEMENT TO

The Wistar Family.

The publication of the genealogy of this family has shown errors which seem to be a part of such a work. All corrigenda received to date have been embodied in this supplement, and it is expected that additional information will be published in this form in the future. The compiler again begs that complete notes of present errors and omissions and future births, deaths and marriages be sent to him. It is regretted that greater interest has not been manifested by the return of more data such as was asked for in the introduction. Thanks are extended to those few who have made the publication of these pages possible.

In order to make the following as concise as may be, changes are here noticed as belonging to a person by her or his generation, family and letter; or to her husband ("husb") or to his wife; or to a family by its generation and number: e. g. the first correction shows that the wife of Bartholomew Wistar (page 9) died in 1870 and not in 1869. Names are not given unless to show errors or additions. When more than one correction in a family is necessary, the family numbers are not repeated.

It is suggested that corrections and additions may be made in writing, in the place shown, the matter here given; or it may be better to indicate by underlining that the supplement should be consulted for further information at such place. Additional families are given without printing on the reverse so that they may be cut out and pasted on the blanks following each generation in the book.

In addition to the brothers and sisters of the first Caspar Wistar as already given on page 5, another list includes Maria Barbara, born 1700, and Maria Margarethe, born 1707. Another sister, Marie, is said to have been born about 1690 and married in 1711 to Captain David Deshler, Aid-de-camp to the Prince Palatine; their son David came to America, entered the counting house of his uncle John Wister and married, leaving descendants.

The following anecdotes have been received from various members of the family :

Caspar Wistar was a cheerful, lively man, and made himself pleasant at table, but on one occasion at dinner he seemed worried and was taciturn. After carving the roast he suddenly left the table, took his hat and went out. He returned before dinner was removed and had recovered his equanimity and cheerfulness. Afterwards he explained the circumstances, he had been persuaded that the black people brought in from Africa as slaves would make more obedient and reliable workmen for his Jersey glass works than the German "Redemptioners" he was employing or using; that morning he had been to see a ship load of black slaves just arrived, had selected a number and had them put aside whilst he thought about it and had then gone home to dinner. The consideration of the proposed purchase had made him so uneasy and unhappy that he could not eat his dinner until he had gone to the ship, seen the captain and declined to buy the slaves; the load was then removed and his unhappiness was over.

An ancestress of many members of the family resided next to Caspar Wistar's house when she was a young girl. His work-room was upstairs and his hammer could be heard hammering out buttons far into the night. He had told the young girl's mother that when stopping off work at night his thumb and finger, in which he held the metal, were so rigid he had to use the other hand to open them.

It has also been told that Caspar Wistar's right hand was partly paralyzed from the constant shocks caused by hammering.

Another anecdote is that he had, down at his glass work's cottage, a nice young orchard which was subject to depredations from his "Redemptioner" work-hands. He resolved to stop it, and knowing the strong superstitions of the Germans, one night, when it was very dark, and a fine tree was about full of ripe fruit, he climbed up into the branches with a cow bell and a few feet of iron chain; he was not mistaken in the expected visit, and he waited till several of the marauders were under the tree, he then tinkled the bell and let his chain clank with the effect of so seriously scaring the visitors that his orchard was considered an uncanny place for a long while afterward.

In answer to some requests for a method of tracing relationship the following is suggested; an example will best explain it. Suppose it is required to find how VI 46 a and VI 73 c are related. Trace the ancestry of each as given by references at the right of the parents' names in each generation until a common ancestor is found, as follows:

VI	V	IV	III	II	I
73 c	27 b	11 d	4 c	1 e	C. W.
46 a	18 d	6 a	1 h	1 a	C. W.

In this case the first Caspar Wistar is the nearest ancestor had in common, his children were brother and sister and their descendants, as given in generations III, IV, V, and VI, are respectively first, second, third and fourth cousins; that is, VI 46 a and 73 c are fourth cousins. In the same way VII 51 a and VI 73 c are found to be fourth cousins once removed. Owing to the many intermarriages there is often more than one line of ancestors to be followed, in one case relationship can be traced in eight ways.
